Hi Adam-- thanks for the email. I think this may be second email (in response to your vm) but wanted to make sure and am replying to this one. EPA statement below, in case you did not have. Also, here is the link to info on EPA Phase 5 sampling: <http://www.epa.gov/region8/superfund/wy/pavillion/phase5.html>

.....

EPA has released new monitoring data as part of the agency's ongoing analysis of ground water quality in the Pavillion, Wyoming area. These data were collected in collaboration with the United States Geological Survey (USGS), which conducted its own sampling at one of the wells. USGS data were released earlier. EPA's new data and the USGS data are generally consistent with the monitoring data included in EPA's December 2011 Draft Report on Pavillion Area Ground Water Investigation. The new EPA data, along with EPA's draft report and USGS data, will be submitted to an independent expert peer review panel. EPA is also taking public comment on the data and will be extending the comment period to January 15, 2013 to give stakeholders sufficient time to consider all data related to the Pavillion, Wyoming groundwater investigation.

Any follow ups should be directed to Alisha or Julia, below. Thanks!

Subject: EPA delaying public comment period?

Richard,

Please excuse my email. I'm in a meeting with no Internet access and am sending from my phone.

I'm at the Pavillion working group meeting today. Martin Hestmark announced that the agency is pushing the public comment deadline on the Pavillion data back to January 15.

Mr. Hestmark referred questions to media relations. I only have one.

Why did the agency feel it necessary to push back the deadline?

Speaking of deadlines, mine is about 4:30 p.m. Mountain Time.

Please email this address if you have any questions. Thank you.
